“We are a dynamic and egalitarian congregation with a warm and inviting atmosphere”

Our Mission

Temple Aliyah is a Conservative synagogue founded in 1964 by a small, dedicated group of families in Needham. Through the years, it has grown and prospered to encompass more than 400 member families. Our members come from Needham, Wellesley, Dover, Medfield, Westwood, Newton, Dedham, and other communities in the greater Boston area, and even a few in New York, New Jersey, and Florida!

We are a dynamic and egalitarian congregation with a warm and inviting atmosphere. Under the leadership of Rabbi Samuel Barth, our Interim Rabbi and Cantor Jamie Gloth, we encourage our members to enrich their Jewish lives, to enhance their Jewish identities, and to engage in lifelong learning. Our spiritual, educational, and social action programs foster the values of Conservative Judaism and reflect our commitment to Torah (Jewish wisdom) and mitzvot (Jewish obligations). We support the broader Jewish community, Israel, and Jews worldwide.

“We encourage our members to enrich their Jewish lives, to enhance their Jewish identities, and to engage in lifelong learning.”

A Message from President Keith Lewinstein

Dear Friends,

I'm delighted to offer a few words of introduction to Temple Aliyah's first formal annual report. We've decided to publish a document like this one every year in part to reflect on our most recent activities and accomplishments, and in part to recognize and thank the many generous donors who keep our doors open and our programs running.

This was a year in which Temple Aliyah moved from an almost entirely remote operation to something closer to pre-pandemic normal. Our Adult Education program built on its established record of success, organizing over 45 programs. Two of these were sponsored by the Jill Segal Memorial Fund, and a number were multi-session courses spread over several weeks. The regular Kiddush Conversations brought people into the building on Shabbat mornings and helped us reacquaint ourselves with our fellow congregants. Our Kehillah Committee organized programs in the fall (ice cream at Defazio Field; Hot Chocolate and Havdalah in the tent) aiming to give people a chance to gather in person for the first time in 20 months. And large numbers of people in fact gathered. As we saw at the Hanukkah Happening, at Sisterhood Shabbat, at the musical Shabbaton weekend, and of course at the spring celebration of Rabbi Perkins, people remain thirsty for this kind of real, face-to-face contact, and that makes me optimistic about our own future as the pandemic recedes. Our acquisition last spring of a tent, which we hope will remain standing through late November, should provide an additional way to gather safely in person as long as weather permits.

This was also a year in which Temple Aliyah broke new ground for itself in sponsoring the resettlement of two Afghan refugees. Significant funds were raised to accomplish this, but even more noteworthy, more than 75 volunteers from every corner of our synagogue gave their time and their skills to settle these two young men. It was an exercise not only in furthering social justice but in re-building our own community. It shouldn't go unremarked that activities around social action and social justice may sometimes have the ancillary benefit of bringing a community like ours together.

New energy also comes from our children, and from the activities and educational programs we provide for them. Gan Aliyah has come into its own, with all its classrooms at or near capacity. Mercaz Aliyah is projected to grow slightly, and last year we saw strong participation from our Mercaz students in various co-curricular activities such as the Purim Carnival and Passover University, activities that also touch the broader synagogue community. Temple Tots came back in person after a year of entirely remote programming, welcoming last May over 40 children and their parents to a Celebrate Spring event with a magician and ice cream. Some of those children have also participated in our Shabbat Yeladim program, which last year brought more families to the building on Shabbat morning and helped bring us closer to what we remember from the pre-pandemic past. Our Mishpachah Aliyah programs helped build connection for families with children in grades K-5, and under the umbrella of Youth at Temple Aliyah we are once again providing opportunities for social connection and community service to our teens.

Bottom line: there's a lot going on. The building is once again starting to buzz with activity both on Shabbat mornings and during the week, and for that we can thank our dedicated and hard-working lay leaders, clergy, professional staff, and office staff, whose names you will find listed elsewhere in this report. One name still new to many of our members is that of our Interim Rabbi, Samuel (Sami) Barth. Rabbi Barth likes to joke that as an interim rabbi, he comes to us "pre-fired." What he means of course is that his role is specifically time limited; he is here to help us take advantage of a rare moment in our institutional history when we can and should step out of our usual way of doing things and experiment a bit. As we prepare to search for and then welcome a new long-term ("settled") rabbi, I hope we will take advantage of this year to push a little bit beyond our comfort zone, beyond the tried and true, so that we can discover new ways to grow as a kehillah.

As you look through the pictures and the names that follow, I hope you'll feel as I do that Temple Aliyah is prepared to do just that. What this report demonstrates above all is that we've emerged from the challenge of the pandemic with our strength intact and our community well positioned to navigate the transitional year ahead of us.

L'Shalom,

Keith Lewinstein

FY2021-22 FINANCIAL SUMMARY

Dear Friends,

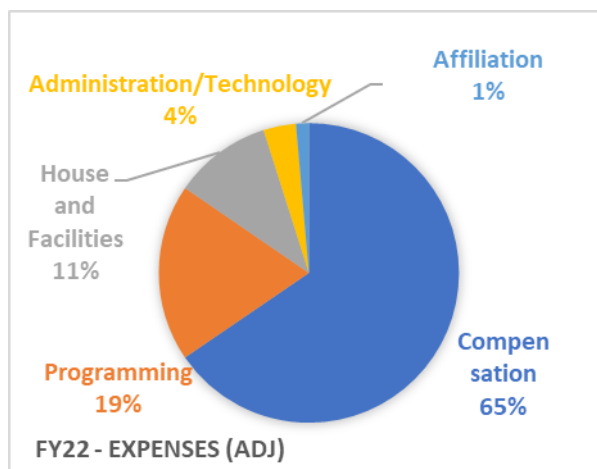

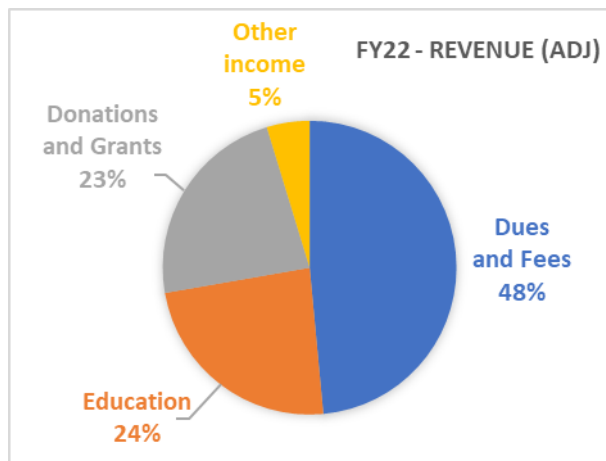

Fiscal year 2021-2022 was a solid year for Temple Aliyah financially. The pandemic continues to have a moderate impact on our finances, with both expenses and dues collections falling below expectations, the former due to programming that has not returned to pre-pandemic levels the latter due in large measure to adjustments for congregants unable to pay full dues. We encourage congregants to pay as much as they are able for annual dues and other charges but we are proud that we are able to support those who find themselves unable to pay full dues, in part through the generosity of other congregants and particularly during these difficult time.

On the education side, Mercaz Aliyah and Gan Aliyah both had excellent years financially and otherwise. For Mercaz Aliyah, enrollment and revenues exceeded expectations and expenses were less than budgeted. Gan Aliyah, aided by strong enrollment for the regular and extended day programs as well as for the summer program and by state and CJP grants, Gan Aliyah was able to break even and set aside funds to support Gan Aliyah in the coming years.

Of great note, we received this year an extraordinary number of unrestricted gifts, including very generous bequests from the estates of three congregants – Molli Krausze z”l, Harvey Leavitt z”l and Hasia Richman z”l. These bequests, and a strong President’s Appeal during Rosh Hashanah, allowed us to (A) grow our Capital Reserve (which is used for capital expenses to maintain and enhance the synagogue building and grounds); (B) add to the synagogue’s endowment; and (C) help grow a fund that we will likely need in order to assist an incoming rabbi acquire housing locally. In addition, we are setting aside a portion of these funds to finance the creation of an outdoor prayer/community space on synagogue grounds.

On the restricted funds side, we raised almost $60,000 for the “Welcome the Stranger Fund” to support the resettlement of Afghan refugees and more than $450,000 for the Rabbi Carl M. Perkins Fund for Experiential Education, or the “Atid Fund,” in honor of Rabbi Perkins on the occasion of his retirement. The Atid Fund will provide resources for Temple Aliyah members to participate in meaningful Jewish encounters, immersive experiences, and hands-on programs.

The charts below show the allocation of income and expenses during this fiscal year, adjusted to exclude the extraordinary donations received this year:

L'shalom,

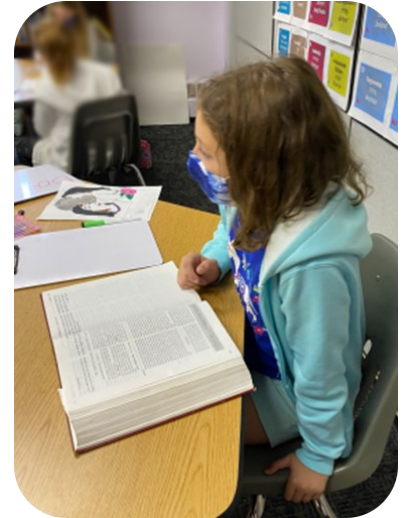

Bruce Berns, Treasurer and Vice President for Finance

EDUCATION AT TEMPLE ALIYAH

Mercaz Aliyah offers Jewish religious education to students in grades K-7. We strive to:

- Enliven Jewish education in order to provide meaningful, inclusive, creative and academic experiences while building community and fostering a love of Jewish living and learning within the framework of Conservative Judaism.
- Nurture the next generation of life-long learners who are eager to remain connected to their synagogue, their community, Israel and Jews throughout the world.
- Provide opportunities beyond the classroom to engage the whole family with whom we share responsibility for transmitting Jewish traditions and values to our children so that they become active participants in all aspects of Jewish life.

Gan Aliyah is a vibrant preschool program thriving within Temple Aliyah. What began as a single classroom of 8 students with 2 teachers has grown to 3 classrooms with 33 students and a team of 8 teachers. We now offer a variety of schedules, accommodating working parents who need longer days. Our program grows from a child-centered, teacher-guided curriculum that emphasizes social and emotional growth, as well as early language, math and science skill development through art, literature, and time to explore and discover. We seamlessly integrate secular and Judaic early childhood learning in deeply meaningful ways that support a love of Judaism, family and community. Our nurturing, personal supportive and intimate community welcomes every student

The Rabbi Carl M. Perkins Fund for Experiential Education or the "Atid Fund" was established in May 2022 to honor Rabbi Perkins on the occasion of his retirement as our Rabbi for 31 years. Meaning "future" in Hebrew, Atid will strengthen Temple Aliyah's future by fostering creative, interactive, and vibrant opportunities for our community to find meaning in our Jewish heritage and in Jewish life.

The Atid Fund will provide dedicated resources for Temple Aliyah members to participate in meaningful Jewish encounters, immersive experiences, and hands-on programs. Activities supported by the Atid Fund may include retreats, trips to Israel and elsewhere, Jewish summer camp, and artistic experiences, all of which may expose our members to a range of Jewish ideas, values, and perspectives. In addition to funding experiential programs led by family educators and other instructors, the Atid Fund will subsidize participation to ensure its programs are accessible to all members.

Community Caring (Hesed) Fund/Mental Health Initiative

The Community Caring Fund, or Hesed, provides support activities to our synagogue community, including, for example, food deliveries during shiva and other assistance for bereaved families ; home and hospital visits; assistance to the elderly and/or infirm, and rides to religious services, doctors' appointments or shopping.

The Mental Health Initiative was developed and is led by a group of congregants who are passionate mental health professionals, with the goals of lessening the stigma around any kind of mental or behavioral health issues or social-emotional challenges, and bringing community and caring to those dealing with these challenges .
